PROGRAM NOTES

Dmitri Shostakovich's Tahiti Trot is a fox trot style arrangement of Vincent Youmans's song "Tea for Two," which was published in 1926. Rumor has it that Shostakovich was challenged by conductor Nikolai Malko to write an orchestral arrangement of this song in less than an hour. He is said to have accomplished the 132-measure orchestration in forty-five minutes! Jerry Brubaker is proud to have produced this first symphonic band arrangement of Tahiti Trot.

There are solos from nearly every section of the ensemble and great dynamic contrast overall. Mr. Brubaker fully appreciates the genius of Shostakovich to be able to produce this work in such a short time as he admits to devoting an entire week to fully orchestrate and prepare this piece for publication.

NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

There is an optional synthesizer keyboard part which provides celesta and harp. It is strongly recommended that this part be covered; however, the part is cued in the bells and woodwinds in the event that a synthesizer is unavailable.

Pay careful attention to balance especially when there is a solo passage (and there are many).

There are many rit. and rall. markings. These can be observed or ignored at the conductor's discretion. They were not in Shostakovich's original manuscript, but added in a later edition.

With regard to the gliss indications in the trombones, there are two types. Most are between two notes in rhythm (i.e. measure 37). However, at measure 53 and following, the gliss is indicated by a grace note which starts before the beat on the pitch indicated and smoothly slides up to the note.

There are two contrasting styles at play in this piece. There is the bouncy staccato style as in the beginning, and there is a very legato style as indicated by phrasing marks. Sometimes a subtle variation in the tempo can help to emphasize these contrasts.

Enjoy!
