TO THE DIRECTOR

The opening piano solo can be played simply and freely, like a children's song. The statement of the theme at m. 13 should have a classical, wind ensemble quality with special attention paid to intonation and blend. The conductor can be creative with the tempo and shaping of the phrases, but the general dynamic shapes should be followed.

When the Latin groove starts at m. 23, the drummer should strive to keep light, understated time, mostly on the cymbals, thus leaving room to grow as the other instruments are added. Also, creative use of auxiliary percussion is certainly appropriate throughout this chart.

In the ensemble sections following, there are frequent rhythms that land on beat four of the bar (mm. 54-55 and m. 75, for example). This rhythmic "hook" occurs throughout the chart, and care must be taken to execute it accurately.

To assist soloists at m. 102, the following scales in concert pitch will work nicely:

C Major Scale	AMi ⁹ (b6)
	DMi ⁹
	C/E
	FMA ⁹ (#11)
	G ⁹ SUS
Eb Major Scale	AbMA ⁹ (#11)
F Major Scale	GMi ⁹
Bb Major Scale	EbMA ⁹ (#11)

In m. 125 there is no scale for C/Ab; play chord tones or a C Major Scale with a flatted sixth and seventh.

The brass should exaggerate the crescendo/diminuendo starting in m. 126 to create a "waves of sound" effect. The bass-line melody in m. 162 should be light and smooth, but still rhythmically accurate. The repeat of this section should be slightly louder with a big crescendo leading into m. 172.

From the unison concert C at m. 191, the winds descend the concert C Major scale slowly and freely (everyone different) until they arrive at their last note. The effect should be one of the unison note breaking apart into cascading scales while the rhythm section vamps until the winds settle into the final chord.
