Johannes Brahms

Sonata No. 2 in F-Major, Op. 99

Edited for Trombone & Piano

by

Ralph Sauer

SECOND EDITION

Editor's Note

All slurs, dynamics, and other expression marks (with rare exceptions) are exactly as in the original. In addition to changing some octave placements, I have eliminated a few measures of non-essential, accompaniment passages in the trombone part in order to afford an occasional rest, adding notes in the piano when necessary. Also, there are some alternate octaves indicated by small noteheads in the last movement. In the third movement, if measures 17 and 18 present a range problem, they may be played down an octave. (In this case, also consider playing measures 19 and 20 down an octave.)

In making a practical performing edition for the trombone, I have purposely avoided notating an interpretation. Other than the items mentioned above, plus adding breathmarks and a few bracketed tempo indications in the first movement, I tried to add as little as possible, leaving matters of interpretation to the performers.

SONATA NO. 2

SONATA No. 2

