To The Director

This Appalachian folk song of Scottish origin, was first discovered and collected by English composer and folk archivist Cecil Sharp, It was then reworked into the melody we know today by folk musician John Jacob Niles in 1921.

In this arrangement, there are five unique accompanimental treatments to the melody which is played by every section of the orchestra. Sustained harmonics in the violins and rich, expressive harmonies enhance the mysterious quality of this passionate and haunting love song.

Extra care should be given in bringing to light the expressive qualities and dynamic changes in both the melody and accompaniment alike. At measure 11, the heart beat rhythm should be played with a softened and rounded approach in order to keep from rushing. The closing harmonic tones should fade away as gently as they awaken in the beginning.
