

SIX ETUDES IN CANON FORM, Op. 56

Arranged for One Piano, Four Hands by Georges Bizet

Edited by Maurice Hinson and Allison Nelson

Foreword

In 1845, Robert Schumann (1810–1856) wrote three sets of pieces for the pedal piano: Six Etudes in Canon Form, Op. 56, Four Sketches, Op. 58 and Six Fugues on the Name B-A-C-H, Op. 60 (the latter being for organ or pedal piano). A pedal piano consists of a foot-pedal mechanism (pedalboard), similar to an organ. The pedalboard is generally used for basic harmonic support, and is designed to play the bass line of a composition, sometimes in octaves.

At the beginning of 1845, Schumann—together with his wife, Clara (1819–1896)—embarked on an intense course of contrapuntal studies. Robert Schumann’s admiration for Bach and his absorption with the study of counterpoint led him to rent a pedalboard attachment for his home, inspiring him to write pieces specifically for pedal piano. It is possible that Robert’s interest in Bach began with his first teacher, organist and choir director Johann Gottfried Kuntsch (1775–1855), to whom the Six Etudes are dedicated.

The great French composer Georges Bizet (1838–1875) arranged the Six Etudes in Canon Form, Op. 56 for one piano, four hands. These etudes are not simply technical finger exercises like Hanon or Czerny, but true works of art like the Chopin etudes. They make wonderful music while working the muscles of the hands and fingers. The canon is the strictest form of counterpoint, in which two or more voices present the same theme in overlapping succession. Imitation may begin on any note and can be any rhythmic distance from the initial theme.

The first Carnegie Hall performance of any of the Op. 56 etudes was on April 11, 1916, when Percy Grainger (1882–1961) performed Etude No. 3. The first complete performance of the six etudes at Carnegie Hall was on December 8, 1939, when Vitya Vronsky (1909–1992) and Victor Babin (1908–1972) performed Debussy’s two-piano arrangement of the etudes. More recently, pianists Emanuel Ax (b. 1949) and Yefim Bronfman (b. 1958) performed the two-piano arrangement at the University of California, Berkeley on March 26, 2005.

Detailed description: The musical score consists of two staves, both in bass clef and 2/4 time. Staff 1 (top) starts with a key signature of four flats. It contains measures 4 through 12, with measure 4 beginning with a dynamic 'p'. Measures 4-7 show a repeating pattern of eighth-note pairs with grace notes. Measures 8-11 show a similar pattern with some variations in the bass line. Measure 12 concludes with a dynamic 'sf'. Staff 2 (bottom) starts with a key signature of four flats. It follows the same measure structure as Staff 1, providing harmonic support. Measure 4 shows a simple bass line with quarter notes. Measures 8-11 show more complex bass patterns. Measure 12 ends with a dynamic 'sf'.
