NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

Jazz pianist/composer Bobby Timmons (1935–1974) was best known for his compositions “Moanin’,” “This Here,” and the subject of this arrangement, “Dat Dere.” This tune first appeared on his debut solo album entitled This Here is Bobby Timmons (1960) and quickly became a jazz standard. This arrangement reflects the soulfulness that was a special part of Timmons’ piano style.

The first and most important performance consideration should be tempo. The piece can be played anywhere from quarter note marking 120 bpm to 132. The preferred tempo is around mm120. I strongly recommend you not to take the piece too fast as it loses much of its soulful and bluesy qualities the faster the tempo.

At measure 9, the sax section unison melody will establish the feel for the chart. The staccato note is critical—keep it light, sort of bouncy and relaxed—do not rush or push the tempo. The brass pops at 17 should be tight and detached/accented as indicated by the rooftop accent—think “daht.” At 25, again, don’t rush the triplets in the brass melody. The tendency is to rush triplets, so try to focus the players on thinking the syllables “doo-dle-do-doo-dat,” which is the triplet and two eighths figure—it might help lock in the clarity of the triplets. This triplet concept will apply to various instruments throughout this chart. Relax the triplets! In measure 40, the two-note triplet figure here is “doo-dit,” then wait (patiently) for the beat 2 hit in 41—don’t jump too soon on beat 2. The shout chorus is at 73—play it big, relaxed, and balanced. Watch out for the cascading triplets in 79—each triplet should all dovetail into each other. Work on that figure to get it smooth.

The basic tune form is AABA. Although this piece is not technically a “blues” form, the soloist can use the concert C blues scale extensively (C - E $\flat$ - F - F $\sharp$ - G - B $\flat$ - C). This arrangement is in the original key of C minor. The repeat at measure 72 is optional for extending or adding solos. The alto soloist can either play the written-out solo or improvise or embellish the written solo as a step toward improvising.

Optional lead trumpet notes are provided toward the end. My recommendation is if your lead player has the chops to play those notes without strain or damage, have him or her go for it. But don’t force those notes and risk damage to the player.

Please enjoy!
