SAN TOO-CHEE

Situated along the shores of Lake Erie, the city of Sandusky, Ohio is in the north-central region of the state. Derived from the Wyandot/Iroquois word SAN TOO CHEE, it refers to the Sandusky Bay, one of the state's primary bodies of water. Combining Wyandot folk music and original compositional material, SAN TOO CHEE is based on two traditional Iroquois songs, Ikwass (We Sing) and Woue no Yianne (Song of Rejoicing).

With colorful percussion and a trio of wind instruments, the piece begins the lively and carefree Ikwass. The music gradually blossoms into full ensemble sound before calmly settling into the haunting yet reposeful song of rejoicing, Woue no Yianne. Suddenly again becoming lively, we are reacquainted with the song Ikwass. As it began with wind trio and percussion, the piece so ends.

SAN TOO CHEE translation: At the Cold Water

REHEARSAL SUGGESTIONS

If needed, the Oboe solo at the beginning and ending are cued for alto sax. For performances, be as "visual" as possible with the Powwow drum to help lend the music more authenticity. A Powwow drum can hopefully be secured; a high Tom-tom or low Bongo drum will suffice otherwise. If no Vibraphone is available, Marimba played with soft mallets makes a suitable substitute.
