He currently lives in the Orlando area, where he is a composer, arranger, orchestrator, freelance trombonist, and active music educator.

About the Music

Sir Edward Elgar's Enigma Variations is a collection of musical vignettes based on several of the composer's acquaintances. Each variation represents a different person, the character of the music in some way depicting that person. Nimrod, the ninth of the 14 variations, was beautifully written for Elgar's friend August Johannes Jaeger. The name Nimrod, meaning "mythical hunter," is a translation of Jaeger's name, which is German for hunter. Jaeger's faith in his friend's ability was one of Elgar's motivating forces as he struggled to distinguish himself as a serious composer.

Not entirely a musical characterization of Jaeger, Nimrod is the portrayal of a conversation between Jaeger and Elgar as they discuss with equal admiration the genius of Ludwig van Beethoven. Elgar's variation is a slow and dignified tribute to their mutual respect of Beethoven's gift for extended and beautifully crafted compositions. It is intended to suggest the slow pace of the opening movement of Beethoven's Piano Sonata No. 8, "Pathetique."

This treatment of Nimrod provides an opportunity to make the renowned piece available to young musicians. It is a wonderful vehicle for introducing phrasing and expression, and is scored in such a way to promote communication within and among different sections of the ensemble. Especially challenging to players is the length of phrases. Breathing schemes will have to be considered for each phrase to achieve forward motion and uniformity of interpretation from beginning to release. Musicians should be especially attentive at phrase endings to enable the director to musically stretch and release the final notes of each statement. Encourage musicians to be patient without pushing the tempo—allow the beauty of the melody to emerge naturally.

Players should carefully observe the many tempo and dynamic indications. The numerous intervallic leaps in the melody have required that it be passed from section to section in places. Musicians should be sensitive to the melodic elements, bringing them out of the ensemble texture when they have them and staying in the background when they do not. Maintaining purity of tone quality and accuracy of diatonic intervals through the dynamic changes will require unbroken concentration.
